

VIRTUAL CONFERENCE 2021

Mixing Methods in Migration Research

Jørgen Carling
Research Professor,
Co-director PRIO Migration
Centre

Rossalina Latcheva
Programme Manager,
Fair and Equal Societies,
Fundamental Rights
Agency

Mixed methods research is an excellent way to capture complex phenomena such as migration due to its possibilities to collect rich, comprehensive data. However, the blending of methods in migration studies remains difficult. In this virtual conference, we bring academic researchers from all over the world together to exchange experiences, interests and ambitions in bringing mixed methods to the next level in the field of migration research.

Come and join us for two keynotes by internationally known experts on practicalities of mixed methods research and the dissemination of its results. Get your mind tickled in a variety of workshops where you can exchange and develop ideas on several issues, such as publishing and representation – and let us discuss challenges and considerations associated with mixed methods research and together move towards a true blending of methodologies.

Registrations open by early July. More information soon here.

SAVE
THE DATE

Thursday
21 October 2021
2:30pm CET – 5:00pm CET

- Keynote J. Carling
- Discussions
- Workshops: Mixed-Methods Plans (for ECRs in specific) | Publishing

Friday
22 October 2021
2:30pm CET – 6:00pm CET

- Keynote R. Latcheva
- Discussions
- Workshops: Dream Designs | Voices and Representation
- Research speed date session

SAVE
THE DATE

Free of charge
Online

dutch association for migration research

Radboud Social Cultural Research
Radboud University

